

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

(Revised 8-13-15)

Ray Madaghiele is a human transformation engineer with heart.

For more than 25 years, he has integrated his extensive scientific knowledge and practical experience with the art of awakening the greatness in people.

Through Ray's writing and engaging speaking, facilitations, workshops, and coaching, individuals are inspired to live happier, more fulfilling personal and professional lives; organizations are aligned and re-energized to be more successful; and communities experience an improved quality of life.

Ray also worked as a civil engineering project manager for ten years prior to transitioning into human and organizational development. His unique background also includes instructing Dale Carnegie courses; co-facilitating "Lasting Happiness" weekend intensives with his wife, Lyn; serving as lay minister and board president of a large Unity church; making spiritual pilgrimages to India; and guiding initiatives to build organizations and communities with character.

Currently, Ray and Lyn are full-time RVers, traveling and enjoying the beauty of North America in their customized 32-foot fifth wheel as they operate their businesses while they roll. In this intriguing way, they continue to spread a positive message of hope wherever they go, inviting each person they meet to be a "ray of hope" in the world.

At the release of the 10-year Anniversary edition of Ray of Hope: Inspiring Peace, the two sons were attending college at the University of Arizona in Tucson. Currently, Dominic and Joe are graduated and enjoying working and living in San Francisco and New York City, respectively.
